

The show is over

To live, we all must breathe, drink, eat, rest, wash, cover us, cure us, to have a refuge in order to feel safe and secure, then we must live with others, esteemed our self and be esteemed, and be free to realize our personality. Except the breathing and relaxation, all the rest is the result of work, understood as a human activity to take and transform natural resources. It always has been. Each creature must exchange energy with the environment.

During this time, human society has experimented with different ways of organizing work, all subject to the rule of selection and conditioned because of the hierarchical structure in which every element of matter is organize, a structure that can be represented as a pyramid in which each step represents a level.

In this structure, one is on a certain level representing himself when he turns up while representing the totality when he turns down. As a result, the one who is on the top of the pyramid represents the total for all others while the one who is on the base represents only himself. So, the one who is on the top determines the material and spiritual conditions of all others.

The quantum mechanics explain how this structure is formed randomly at the beginning of time and has remained intact so far. The original cause of this structure is the selection, a process through which most of the elements of a system exist only to evolve the entire system, while a minority draws the highest returns. It's as much for the most elementary particles as for the most complex organism than we know: the human being.

Until recently, it was impossible to change this structure because it was impossible to change the rule of selection. The ratio of human beings, natural resources and the level development of productive forces is not allowed to live well and above all to have sufficient initial conditions to achieve the highest level of individual development of all. So, some people would continue to be enslaved in the evolution of the human system as a whole.

Attempts to change are not missed, but precisely because of the initial conditions, everything has remained as before. As long as the human species had not reached a certain level of development, no new structure could be adopted. Because of this, those who found himself on the top of the pyramid could dominate the entire system and to make the reality more acceptable, he has imposed, deceived and deluded all means available to him, relying also on the same limits of the subject of the lowest levels: the large majority. This shows us the reality beyond the ideas and theories.

But for decades, humanity has reached a level of development that can objectively abandon the rule of natural selection and change the structure of the human system. All the simulations and the abstract models lead to the same conclusion: you can change if you decide and you decide if you want.

At the same time, those at the top of the pyramid do not want to give up their power and try in every way to save it. To do this, they are forced to associate with the complexity of an infinite series of complications to keep the greater awareness of reality. But the effects of these same complications represent the limit of tolerability to the majority.

And when this majority, than made to suffer the effects of selection and live badly, become aware of their possibilities and, in particular of the reasons why things are still in a certain way and not otherwise, they wake up. From this awakening is induced the rebellion and emerges the necessity and the possibility of eliminating the selection and change the structure of the system and the show is over.

Billions of people, four fifths of the world population, understand that things can be done differently. Arise! Those at the top try to confuse and divert their desires to maintain the old order, both as form and as a substance in several appearances. But it is not possible, because the resilience of a system can face the emergency until this emergency become to be a strange attractor, while cannot do this when most of the elements of a system, driven by necessity and the possibility of change, emulate and become part of emergency.

Everything will happen quickly. Someone will trigger the process, perhaps with some trick. His ideas and proposals emerging and others will aggregate themselves by practicing and spreading those ideas. Everything becomes overwhelming. It is not only a transition or a phase shift but a real structural change that comes from a different way of perceiving reality. Barriers, clichés, the old myths and all the theories and fantasies designed to mystify the reality, fall down. The show is over. Nothing will ever be the same again.

Monday, May 22, 2011

Rodolfo Marusi Guareschi